

Cervical cancer vaccine

No parent wants their child to get cervical cancer. No woman wants to suffer from this disease. But is vaccination the answer?

In the last 12 months, the Australian government has received an average of 17 reaction reports a week to the Gardasil vaccine against cervical cancer. More than one-third of those who have reacted have not recovered.

Before we offer our daughters and ourselves up for this vaccine experiment, get informed about the true benefits and risks. If you have already had the vaccine and suffered a reaction, make sure it is reported by phoning 1800 007 468.

For further information on this and other vaccines, visit www.avn.org.au or call 02 6687 1699 during business hours.

Investigate BEFORE you vaccinate.

The Australian Vaccination Network PO Box 177 BANGALOW NSW 2479